Well, utility of BNB is just so nicely tied into the system that holding and trading BNB will make sense to a good portion of the users who are holding accounts and active in Binance. The volume of users there makes this a viable coin.

Good token and the utility despite not too deep tech/blockchain, with a growing size in the market, this will always do well.

This is not financial advice or a recommendation to invest in this or any other ICO. Investors must perform their own due diligence and not rely on external ratings to make their final investment decisions. ICOs are risky and 100% loss of capital is possible.

I did not get why Binance has so slow rank: this exchange is very good, never got hacked until now, they list only good projects. the BNB coin is necessary to vote on their website for the listing of a new coin or to receive a discount on fees (almost 0,05% when I write this review).

Founders of this ICO are very good and the developer team is highly professional in what they are doing right now. Lots of peoples are using Binance for exchanging their token/coin.
This is surely one of the best exchange platform right now in the market.
